

Magnetic Clothing

“Magnetic Tee”

“Magnetic Pants”

Magnetic clothing for the experimental fashionista or the prankster.

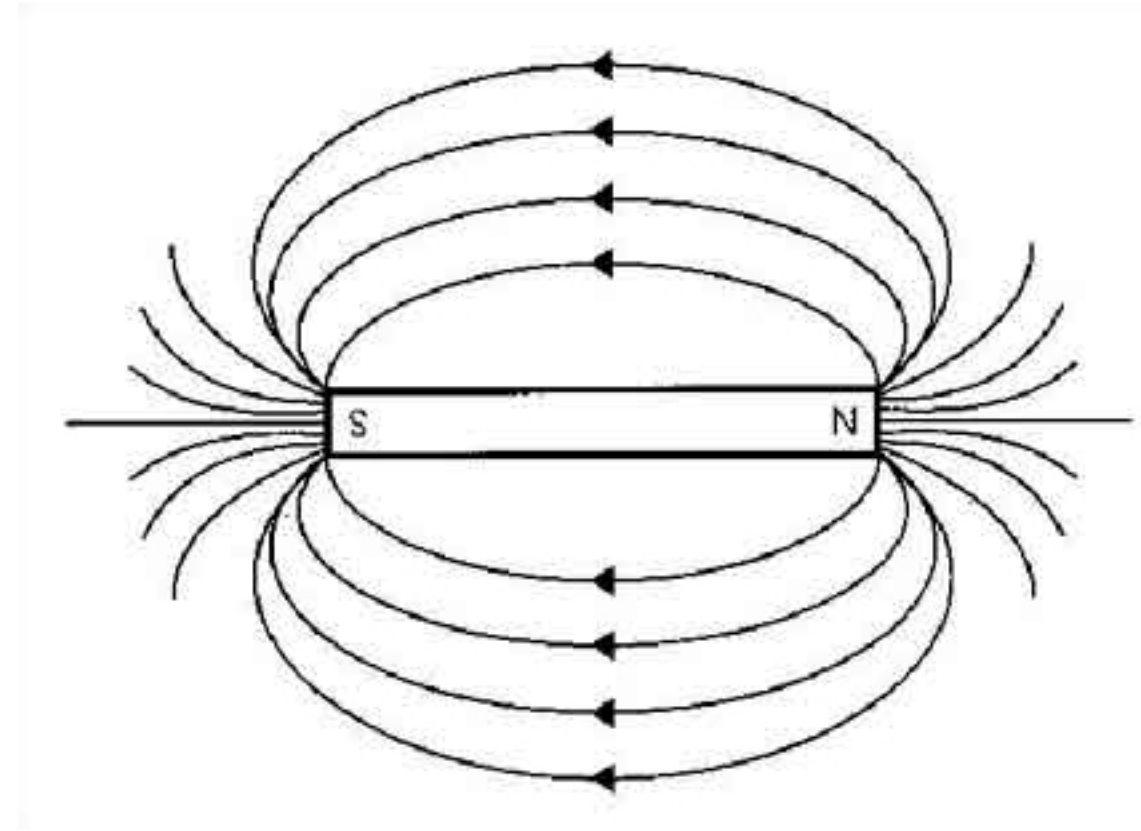

Depending on what pole faces outwards, some shirts will repel each other while others will attract. Sold in pairs or single. If bought as a pair, one could choose if they repel or attract.

Magnetic Clothing

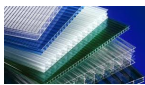

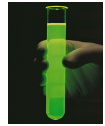

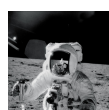

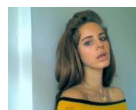

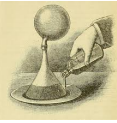

+

Designs created with use of the liquify tool in Photoshop, tracing the pattern of a magnetic field repeatedly

=

	Experimental fashionista	Conservative prude	Science enthusiast	Bitter relationship hater	Light-hearted pranking
Interactions	 Walking the runway	Giving detention	Lab work, testing, hypothesis		Card tricks, whoopi cushion, hand buzzer
Structure /forms
Material
Shape /silhouette
Type	 	  	 	ABCDEFGHIJKLM NOPQRSTUVWXYZ
Photo
Illustration
Palette
Pattern /texture
Icon
Ornament

Repelling Magnetic Shirts

Potentially a switch to reverse the magnetism.

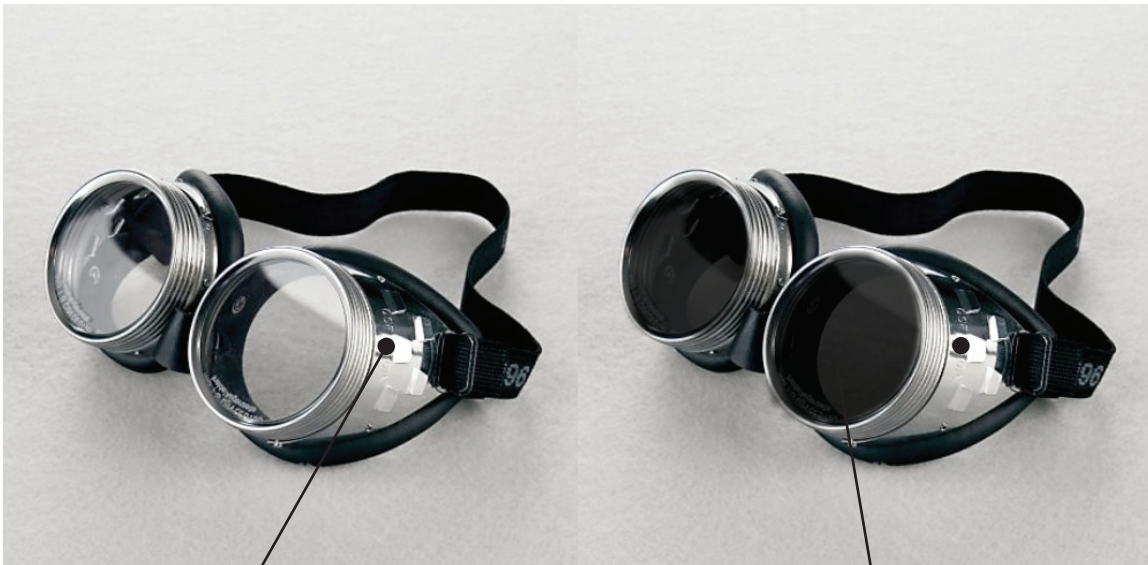

Basic white tees, available in different sizes, that are lined with some sort of material that makes the shirts strongly magnetic. T-shirts would have some sort of pattern/imagery to reference their magnetism (it would probably not be a magnet, as shown above).

Buyer could feasibly give these to friends who display a little too much affection in public. The couple would be unable to touch each other physically because of the magnetic shirts repelling each other.

Magnetic material would line inside of fabric, with their like poles facing outwards.

Vision Cancelling Goggles

There are sound cancelling headphones; now there are vision cancelling goggles. With the flip of a switch, any unsightly PDA or other gross things are completely invisible to you. Don't wear while crossing the street or doing any other dangerous activity. Or set to 50% and use as sunglasses.

On/off knob. Twists to adjust darkness/opacity of goggles. Turn all the way for no vision at all, 50% for sunglasses, 0% for completely clear.

Fading lenses.